One day, I happened to find a wallet. I picked it up and opened it to see if I could find out the owner's name. There was nothing inside it except some change and an old photograph — a picture of a woman. I put the photograph back and took the wallet to the police station.

That evening I went to have dinner with my aunt and uncle. They also invited a young woman so that there would be four people at the table. Her face was familiar. I was quite sure that we had not met before, but I could not remember where I had seen her. While talking, however, the young woman happened to mention that she had lost her wallet that afternoon. All at once I realized where I had seen her. She was the woman in the photograph, although she was now much older. She was very surprised, of course, when I was able to describe her wallet to her. Then I explained that I had recognized her from the photograph I had found in the wallet. My uncle insisted on going to the police station immediately to get the wallet. As the policeman handed it over, he said that it was amazing that I had not only found the wallet, but also the person who had lost it.

Before you make friends, you have to decide who you want to be your friends. Most people like to have friends who like to do the same kind of things they do.

The quickest way to make a friend is to smile. When you smile, people think you are friendly and easy to talk to. It may not be easy at first to smile, but remember most people will stay away from a scary or angry looking.

One easy way to start a conversation with someone is to say something nice about him. Think about how great you feel when someone says something nice to you. Doesn't it make you want to keep talking to that person?

Ask your new friends questions about themselves. 'Who's their favorite singer? Where do they live? What do they do after school?' are all good questions to start a conversation. Make sure you have something to add to the conversation, too. When someone asks you a question, do have an answer for it. There is nothing that will stop a conversation quicker than a shrug for an answer.

Kids who show an interest in other kids and who are kind and friendly make good friends. Remember everyone wants to be around people who like to do similar things and people who are nice to them.

44. The passage gives us some advice on _____.
 A. how to make friends B. who you can make friends with
 C. how to start a conversation D. the importance of smile
45. According to the second paragraph, most people enjoy talking to one _____.
 A. who seems to be friendly B. who is always smiling
 C. who points out their shortcomings D. who praise them

46. The underlined part in this passage means “_____”.
- A. being very proud B. knowing nothing

Overhead bridges are found in many parts of Beijing, especially in places where traffic is very heavy and crossing the road is dangerous.

The purpose of these bridges is to enable pedestrians (行人) to cross roads safely. Overhead bridges are used very much the same way as zebra crossings. They are more efficient (效率高的) although less convenient because people have to climb up a long flight of steps. This is inconvenient especially for older people. When pedestrians use an overhead bridge, they do not hold up traffic. However, when they cross a busy road using a zebra crossing, traffic is held up. This is why the government has built many overhead bridges to help pedestrians and to keep traffic moving at the same time.

The government of Beijing has spent a large amount of money on building these bridges. For their own safety, pedestrians should be encouraged to use them instead of risking (冒...危险) their lives by dashing across the road. Old people, however, may find it a little difficult climbing up and down the steps, but it is still much safer than walking across the road with all the danger of moving traffic.

Overhead bridges serve a very useful purpose. Pedestrians, both old and young, should make it a habit to use them. This will prevent unnecessary accidents and loss of life.

47. What is the advantage of overhead bridges mentioned in this passage?
 - A. Taller trucks can pass under them.
 - B. They are safer for pedestrians and can keep traffic moving at the same time.
 - C. Pedestrians can climb up and have a view of the city.
 - D. They are easier and more convenient for the pedestrians.
48. Why were overhead bridges built in Beijing?
 - A. Because they save time for the pedestrians.
 - B. Because they provide an easy way for the drivers to cross the road.
 - C. Because they save money for the government.
 - D. Because they prevent traffic from being held up.
49. Which of the following statements is true according to the passage?
 - A. Overhead bridges are found in places where traffic is heavy.
 - B. Overhead bridges are only found in the centre of Beijing.
 - C. Overhead bridges are found in many parts of big cities in China.
 - D. Overhead bridges are found in every part of Beijing.
50. What is the writer's attitude towards overhead bridges?
 - A. It is inconvenient for older people to walk across the road.
 - B. To build overhead bridges is the business of the government.
 - C. An overhead bridge is more beautiful than a zebra crossing.
 - D. It is much safer for pedestrians though climbing up and down the steps may be a little difficult.

Dear Charles,

I am writing to tell you something about my first semester at senior high school. My new school is twice larger than my previous one, which has a beautiful campus with trees, plants and flowers. The classrooms have installed computers and whiteboards. My new classmates are friendly. I have made several friends now. Our new teachers are enthusiastic, especially our English teacher, who often encouraged us to speak English. We were all nervous but excited. All the teachers taught us some learning methods. I am sure I can make much progress in this school.

Looking forward to knowing something about your new school life.

Yours,

M: Not at all.

(Text 7)

W: Why don't you sit down? Now, there are several questions I must ask you if you don't mind.

M: Not at all. Go ahead.

W: What is the purpose of your visit to the States?

M: I'm going to attend a conference on air pollution.

W: When and where is this conference being held?

M: It's being held in the first two weeks of February at the University of Stanford in California.

W: Who will pay your expenses?

M: The University of Stanford. Here is the official letter of invitation.

W: I see. Fine. When do you want to go?

M: I'd like to leave in mid-January if my passport is ready by then.

(Text 8)

W: Hi, Martin. How are you?

M: Fine, but busy.

W: We've got some exams next week, remember? How much work did you do last night?

M: None. I went to the cinema. What about you?

W: I had no time last night. It was my sister's birthday, so we all went out to dinner.

M: Have you done any work this morning?

W: Some, but not a lot. Anyway, I rang to ask you something. Do you know where my physics book is?

M: I've got no idea, but you can borrow mine if you want.

W: Thanks.

M: Let's meet outside Natbank in High Street at lunch time. I'll bring my physics book to you.

W: Good idea. I'm very worried about the physics exam. Have you got any old exam papers? I'd really like to look through them.

M: I haven't, but my brother's got some. I'll bring them with me at lunch time.

W: Wonderful! See you at 12:30. OK?

(Text 9)

M: Hilda, I know you're busy, and I really hate to bother you, but...

W: What is it, Bill?

M: Well, I was hoping you could give me a ride to the airport.

W: Can't you take the subway?

M: My flight is early in the morning on Sunday. I don't think the subway is open then.

W: Well, I've got tons of homework to do before next Monday. You know we have exams on Wednesday afternoon. What about calling a taxi? It shouldn't be too expensive on a day with so little traffic.

M: You're right. But it's not money. I'm worried about the time of day.

W: You think there won't be any taxis on the road in the morning?

M: Exactly. I won't be able to get a ride and I'll miss my flight.

W: My neighbor sometimes drives people to the downtown area. He charges them at a reasonable price.

M: Do you think he'd take me?

W: I'll be happy to give you his number.
