

teaching to make simple sentences by a teacher. Then, something unexpected and believable happened. I needed to study at American school. The method was total different from Chinese schools. American teachers would not force you to doing anything, and it was okay to make mistakes. Although I got a zero in my exam, but the teacher wasn't angry with me. Instead, he corrected them one by one and explained them for me. Under the help of this teacher, I become interested in learning English.

D

"China's food delivery apps Meituan and Ele, me said they didn't eavesdrop on (窃听) customers through mobile phone microphones to provide targeted ads," said Beijing Daily on Tuesday, Mar. 19th, 2019.

On Monday, IT Times, a news provider focused on the digital industry, published a report suspecting that Meituan and Ele, me apps could be secretly listening to users' personal communications without their permission.

The report said when the reporter said to others that she wanted to eat Japanese food, the Ele, me app advised her of a Japanese restaurant just two minutes later. She then tested some other keywords, including "Hong Kong food" and "tea shop". Sure enough, a few minutes later, the author found the mentioned food was placed in the top of the app's restaurant suggestions, even though she had never ordered it before.

According to the reporter's 3-month research, more than 70 percent of food or restaurants that she talked about appeared in the recommended places on the two delivery apps.

Meituan said that they never collected users' voice data to recommend services. Only when users are actively searching for food or restaurants, will they make related recommendations.

"Ele, me hasn't made such product settings, and from a technical aspect (层面), the

What you choose to wear communicates a lot about who you are and how you see yourself. So in the all-important job interview, what color should you wear to make a great first impression?

According to 2,099 hiring managers and human resource professionals who took part in CareerBuilder's recently published survey, blue and black are the best colors for a job interview, and orange is the worst.

Colors, such as black, blue, gray, and brown, seem to be the safest bet when you are meeting someone for the first time in a professional setting. However, colors that signal more creativity, like orange, may be too loud for an interview.

Black: Leadership

Black can be seen as unfriendly, but if you wear it correctly, it can also "communicate being able". Black is a color that is taken seriously.

Blue: Team Player

Blue is one of the best colors to wear on a job interview because it suggests trust and confidence. You are more likely to get the job when you wear navy blue to an interview than any other color.

Gray: Logical

Wearing gray communicates independence. This doesn't have to be a bad thing, as long as you show that you're confident. This may say to others that you're quite individual, who is able to think on your own.

White: Organized

Wearing white and beige (米色) is a safe bet, but you may be considered "dull and lacking in self-confidence". Wear white or beige for a job where everyone else wears loud colors.

After 13 years with the Royal Mail, you might think Peter Willis could happily spend his retirement (退休) without ever seeing another post box.

But the former postman has decided to keep himself busy by photographing as many of Britain's 115,000 post boxes as possible.

The 67-year-old man has covered thousands of miles taking pictures of 2,500 post boxes since he started this great activity five years ago.

Mr Willis, who worked as a Royal Mail manager before he retired, said, "It started out as a bit of a hobby but has developed into a bit of an obsession (痴迷). There is something wonderful about discovering a post box which is in a strange location or is particularly old but is still being used by people to communicate with each other. When I've taken a picture of a post box, I will remove it from the list. I'm not sure whether I can get round all 115,000. I've done around 2,500 boxes and I'm always looking out for the next one."

He takes his wife Dianne, 64, with him along the way. "She often stands guard if I'm in the middle of the road taking pictures as I get down on my hands and knees to record the bases, which have details of the producers on them. She is usually telling the passing public that I'm not actually mad. I suppose she gets a bit bored sometimes. Sometimes she'll let me go off on my own." said Mr Willis.

Over the past years, Mr Willis has photographed post boxes in Inverness, Dublin and across England. His photos include unusual locations, such as several post boxes at the top of hills and even one inside a theatre.

When he finds a new post box, Mr Willis photographs the base to record the producer's name and gives a grid reference (坐标参考) on a map.

24. What's Peter Willis' hobby?
- Searching for special post boxes.
