Yesterday was my stepmother's birthday. I haven't been home for a long time, so I wanted to stop by the house to see her on this special day. I have been struggling in terms of money, so I was afraid that I couldn't 41 the long journey. Gas is so expensive nowadays! Anyway, I filled my oil tank with gas and 42.

I stopped at a shopping mall and found a present. There I found the most 43 gift that I had never seen--- a nice silk scarf made in China, and I knew she would love it. However, when I got to the cashier, my credit card was 44: I didn't have enough money to pay for the gift!

So I stood there and thought about the 45 for a few minutes. I could put it back and get something cheaper, but I knew there was 46 else in the store my stepmother would have liked as much. As a 47, I got some money from my saving account to buy the scarf. Though it took a large part of my savings, I just wanted to 48 her.

Later, when I arrived at my parents' house, I gave the scarf to my stepmother. Her eyes lit up. It 49 that she really love the gift. I felt very 50 even though I had spent almost all my money. I was glad I gave her the best that I could.

Before I left, my dad took me to one side and gave me a 51 handshake. I felt something 52---it was some money. I was frozen---I had never 53 anything to them about my difficulty.

When I got to the car, I saw the money he gave me was three times what I had 54 that day. At that time, I knew parents always cared for us much more than we 55. Tears rushed out and I couldn't hold them back.

I shook hands with my father in the truck, and for a long time he looked straight ahead and didn't say a word. But I knew he was going to say a little to me. "I can't tell anything," he finally said. "I never went to college, and none of your brothers went to college. I can't say 'don't do this and do that', because everything is different and I don't know what is going to come up. I can't help much with money either, but I think things will work out."

He gave me a new check-book. "If things get pushing, write a small check. But when you write one, send me a letter and let me know how much. There are some things we can always sell." In four years all the checks I wrote were less than a thousand dollars. My part-time jobs such as reading to the blind student and sitting with the teachers' kids filled in the financial gaps.

"You know what you want to be, and they'll tell you what to take," my father went on. "When you get a job, be sure it's honest, and work hard." I knew that soon I would be alone in the big town, and I would be missing the cool winds and a life where your thinking was done for you. Then my dad reached down beside his seat and brought the old, broken Bible that he had read so often, the one he used when he wanted to look something up in a friendly quarrel with one of the neighbors. I knew he would miss it. I knew, though, that I must take it.

He didn't say "read this every morning". He just said, "This can help you if you will let it." Did it help? I got through college without being a burden on the family. I have been able to make money since.

There was once a wrestler (搏斗者) called Vijay Singh—a tall man with strong arms. Vijay Singh, people said, was a born wrestler and could beat all other wrestlers in the world.

This wrestler had one weakness, boasting (吹牛), which often got him into uncomfortable situations. One day, he was in the market with a group of young men, who were his admirers. He suddenly said that he wanted to find a giant (big and great) animal and taught him a lesson.

So one of his admirers told him there was a giant in the forest and it had been killing villagers. Feeling regretful (后悔的), yet he said that he would go to kill the monster. In the evening, almost the whole village went to see him off and an old woman came forward and put a small pack in his hand.

Then he left for the giant. Before long he found the giant, which was a huge animal with very sharp teeth and also strong legs. He was so scared and didn't know what to do. All of a sudden, he thought of the small pack the old woman gave him. So he opened it and found nothing but an egg. He was surprised but soon he had an idea. He picked up a piece of rock and told the giant that it was filled with liquid (液体). So the giant tried to squeeze (捏) it but no liquid came out. The giant tried and tried with all its strength, but failed. Finally, it had to give up. In the meanwhile, Vijay took out from the egg secretly and said loudly, "I could break it easily." Without another word, he took the rock from the giant and squeeze it and at once, yellow liquid ran from around his fingers. The giant was surprised at his strength and felt Vijay was really strong and ran away.

The next day, he returned to the old woman, thanked her for her valuable gift, and asked for her granddaughter's hand in marriage.

From then on Vijay Sign was more careful about boasting. It is said that no villagers were ever killed in the forest again.
