The Hong Kong-Zhuhai-Macao Bridge is a 55-kilometer-long bridge across the Pearl River Delta (珠江三角洲). The construction of the bridge began in December 2009. It is the world's longest sea-crossing bridge. The bridge consists of a 6.7-km undersea tunnel (隧道), which is the country's first offshore immersed tunnel and the world's longest immersed tunnel for road traffic. It is connected to the bridge through two offshore artificial (人工的) islands.

The HZMB has a dual 3-lane carriageway; the speed limit is 100km/h on the main bridge. As the bridge is mostly located in mainland waters, vehicles will keep to the right of the road. Cars can change to the left after having passed the boundary checkpoints in Hong Kong and Macao.

After the bridge opened to traffic on October 24, 2018, traveling time by road between Zhuhai and Hong Kong International Airport will be shortened from four hours to just 45 minutes. The time between Zhuhai and Hong Kong's container terminals (集装箱码头) will be cut from 3.5 hours to one hour and 15 minutes. As travel time among the three cities was shortened, the bridge will improve the flow of goods, talents, information and capital between Hong Kong and other cities of the Guangdong-Hong Kong-Macao Greater Bay Area.

Also, the operation of the bridge will create more opportunities and space for Hong Kong's younger generation to live, study and work. In addition, the HZMB is an achievement of the "one country, two systems" principle (原则) as the three places - Guangdong province and two SARs - closely cooperated on the project.
