Blues(布鲁斯音乐) is very important for today's American music. We can say there wouldn't be jazz, country music or rock and roll without blues. Where did blues come from? It arrived hundreds of years ago with the ships that brought the slaves (奴隶) from Africa. These men and women lost almost everything except (除.....外) their music. They brought it with them. Slaves often sang to help make the work in the fields easier. Blues music grew out of these work songs. The music was played on simple instruments (乐器).

It's easy to understand the beat (节奏) of blues music. The first and the most important instrument in blues is the human voice. Blues began with the human voice. The next most important instrument in blues may be the guitar. It became popular with black musicians in the south in the 1920s. Now when you play blues, if you add drums, a piano and perhaps a violin, you already have a blues band.
