Dear Mum,

I have studied abroad for some time. I miss you very much.

A few days ago, we learned a poem and discussed the famous line “You don’t know what you’ve got until it’s gone.” Miss Li told us that her primary school teacher made a huge difference in her life. She told us her teacher encouraged her. But she had no chance to tell her. She was sad about this. This made me think a lot, especially when I’m thousands of kilometers away. I’m writing to you because I want you to know how much I love you.

A friend once said that a person's happiness was mostly because of their childhood. I agree with her. I still remember the times when you held my hand and counted steps with me as we walked along. You told me stories about the brave elephant and encouraged me to be a confident girl. I also remember that you read books at your desk and I played with my toys on the bed nearby. In cool autumns, we took many walks along the street, talking and laughing together. My childhood was filled with these warm memories.

Time flies and so much has happened. There have been good times and bad times, successes and failures, but you were always by my side. When I won a prize, you smiled and said you were proud of me. When I failed an exam, you encouraged me and said that everything would be fine. Your words encouraged me to deal with all my difficulties.

I think I'm now living a happy life and it's all because of you. Thank you, Mum.

Love,

Lily

Many companies (公司) today hold meetings to discuss their new plans. As people are paying more attention to the environment problems, more companies are looking for ways to reduce (减少) their bad influence on the environment. Many of them achieve this by using web meeting.

Web meeting is a technology that allows people to communicate better over the Internet. It's an easy way of hosting and attending a meeting. Participants (与会者) don't have to leave the office. Each of them will receive an invitation with the meeting time and date on it. When the meeting is ready to begin, they must sit before their computers.

With web meeting, all participants can attend the meeting at their own desks. ▲ As a result, no fuel (燃料) is used and less time is taken up in attending a web meeting.

Materials for the meeting are simply e-mailed to all the participants before it begins. Then participants can just read them on the screen. For the company, this not only saves the use of paper but also greatly reduces the mailing cost.

As a meeting hall is not used, the only power for a web meeting is the power that is used by the computers. Besides, organizers don't have to pay for food and rooms for the participants. All this means that less energy is used.

In a word, web meeting is a cheaper and greener way of hosting and attending a meeting.

38. The underlined word "this" in Paragraph 1 refers to _____.

- A. hold meetings with other companies
- B. reduce bad influence on the environment
- C. pay attention to the environment problems
- D. discuss the new plans with other companies

- A. They just have to wait before the meeting begins.
- B. They don't need to drive a car to have the meeting.
- C. They can do something else while having the meeting.
- D. They needn't walk for a long time to have the meeting.

40. Which of the following is true about web meeting?

- A. Companies don't use any power or energy.
- B. Participants can have the meeting everywhere.
- C. Participants read the materials for the meeting on paper.
- D. Companies can hold a web meeting without a meeting hall.

41. The passage is mainly about _____.

- | | |
|----------------------------------|---|
| A. what web meeting is | B. how to attend a web meeting |
| C. the advantages of web meeting | D. the companies that hold web meetings |

① Supermarkets only sell food before its "sell-by" date. So where does food past its "sell-by" date go? The answer is in the trash bin. Besides shops, people also cast away a lot of food when they buy too much and can't eat it up. To stop food waste, people have come up with great ideas. Take a look and try to join the action!

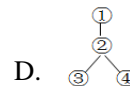

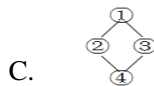

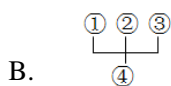

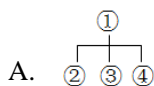

② Set up food banks. When we have extra money, we save it in banks. This idea made people think. Could they set up "banks" for food? The world's first food bank started in the US in 1967. Many other countries, including China, have caught up with this great idea. For example, Shanghai has recently made a “share fridge”. It stores cakes and canned food donated (捐赠) from nearby markets and restaurants. It’s free for anyone to enjoy.

③ Pay as you feel. The Real Junk Food Project is a company in the UK. It says that food past its “sell-by” date could still be OK to eat. So they collect it from supermarkets, and put it on shelves (货架) in special cafes. There, the food has no price label (标签). You can give as much money as you want. If you don’t want to spend money, you can help do some work there. There are now 125 Real Junk Food cafes worldwide. And the number is growing quickly.

④ Buy less. When there’s no food bank around, what can we do to help stop food waste? In two words: Buy less. Dining halls in more than half of US colleges are going tray-less (无托盘). It makes it harder for students to take too much. This small change brings a big difference. It reduces food waste by 25 to 30 percent, and saves water and energy because there are no trays to wash.

42. How does the writer organize the writing?

43. The underlined words “cast away” in Paragraph 1 probably means ____.

- A. put away B. take away C. give away D. throw away

44. Which of the following is true according to the article?

- A. People need to pay for food from “share fridge”.
B. No trays helps to reduce food waste and save water.
C. Fifty percent of American restaurants are going tray-less.
D. The food in the Real Junk Food Project is free for anyone.

45. What’s the main purpose of the writing?

- A. To show how important the food bank is.
B. To introduce some ways of stopping food waste.
C. To ask people to buy food past its “sell-by” date.
D. To discuss where the food past its “sell-by” date goes.
