A few years ago my wife and I took a trip to Costa Rica. Upon arrival we rented(租) a car and headed out to our hotel which was a few hours away. I had a __41__ so I thought I'd be in great condition. About 20 minutes into the drive I found myself __42__ in the unmarked streets and dirty roads. Upset. I turned to Siri, a virtual(虚拟的) assistant in my phone, for help.

I typed the __43__ of our hotel in my phone and soon Siri had __44__ the best route(路线) to get there and we were on our way.

The only__45__was that things didn't always go the way I thought they would. With the streets not being well __46__I would sometimes miss a turn and head in the __47__direction. Luckily, Siri never got mad with me. Any time I missed a turn Siri would simply __48__and say, "Recalculating(重新计算) route. Changing route."And within a few seconds, Siri would have a new route __49__ to get us to our destination.

Sometimes the new route meant I had to__50__ to the right turn and sometimes she found a different route that took my new location into account. Finally, we __51__ it to our hotel safely and enjoyed some beautiful scenery along the way.

Most people make the __52__of thinking that success and happiness come from someone setting a goal and then going straight towards it. The__53__ is that there is no straight path to success. There isn't even the__54__ path. There are many paths that can get you to your goals. You just have to be__55__to recalculate your route when you miss a turn or there is something in your way.

INFO BITES

Fight to the finish.

Zhang Weili celebrates her victory. XINHUA

In a match that was called “one of the greatest fights I’ve ever seen in my life” by fight commentator (评论员) Joe Rogan, Chinese MMA (mixed martial arts, 综合格斗) fighter Zhang Weili beat Polish fighter Joanna Jedrzejczyk on March 7.

Zhang, 30, and Jedrzejczyk, 32, squared off (打斗) in Las Vegas, with Zhang successfully defending her strawweight (草量级) UFC (终极格斗冠军赛) title. The fight was highly anticipated, as both women are known as top fighters among their peers.

Zhang’s training was cut by the novel coronavirus outbreak. It forced her to travel from Beijing to Thailand and then to Abu Dhabi before arriving in Vegas about a week later than planned, according to China Daily. Worse still, Zhang was offended (激怒) by a post on social media in which Jedrzejczyk seemed to make fun of the outbreak. In a mock poster that Jedrzejczyk posted, she wears a gas mask (防毒面具) standing behind Zhang.

Although the post was later deleted, Zhang said that she was fired up to make Jedrzejczyk pay for the tasteless joke in the octagon (八角格斗场).

In the end, Zhang scored a narrow win over Jedrzejczyk, with both ending up in the hospital due to the intensity (激烈程度) of their fight.

“All fighters deserve respect from one another in the octagon. I don’t like people hitting each other with trash talk,” said Zhang following her victory. “We go for the championship with our punches (拳头) but we shall never end up being remembered as only talking with violence (暴力).”

“Now the virus situation is not just affecting China, but the whole world. I hope everybody in the world can stand together to fight the virus with a united effort,” she said.

B

When I was younger, I wished for a Porsche and a big house. That was my idea of success. I took all the advanced classes possible and took the exams with my mind set on going to a key school. I just knew that I would somehow become famous and be able to afford that car and the dream house. All the way through junior year, my mind was planning this beautiful future.

Then in the eleventh grade, many losses changed my mind. First, one of my friends died at the age of 16. Soon after, my great-grandmother passed away, and on the same day, my beloved fourth-grade teacher. They left me not knowing what to do or where to go. Death had never touched me so closely.

After a long period of emptiness, it finally struck me; life is not promised and neither is my future success. While I was going through the actions in an attempt to achieve material success, I was not enjoying my daily life. I was just existing. I realized that life has more purposes than getting materials, which will only be yours until you can no longer keep up with the payments. I realized that finding inner peace, purpose and happiness will stick with you forever and that is real success.

Enjoying life's great changes makes a person more successful than a wealthy person who is not satisfied and takes everything for granted(把...当成理所当然). The summer before senior year, my attitude changed greatly. Instead of memorizing facts, I began learning information. Instead of focusing on the future, I focused on today and the successes that come with it.

I still make excellent grades, but now I spared weeks to studying instead of preparing for exams, and I think about the future with a deeper sense of meaning. Success, just like beauty, is in the eye of the beholder(旁观者). For me, being successful means truly living life each day, being thankful, and affecting the world.

- () 61. The main idea of the first paragraph is ____.
- A. the writer drew a beautiful picture for his future
- B. the writer was an intelligent student at school
- C. the writer was mad for success
- D. the writer devoted himself to material success
- () 62. The underlined word "existing" probably means ____.

A.living B.fighting C.exciting D.disappearing

- () 63. Which of the following statements is TRUE according to the passage?
- A. People can truly enjoy daily life by trying to achieve material success.
B. Success can only be measured with a Porsche and a big house.
C. People should concentrate on today and success will follow afterwards.
D. The pursuit of inner peace, purpose and happiness is a real success.
- () 64. The fact that changed the writer's attitude towards life was that _____.
A. he couldn't afford the a Porsche and a big house
B. some of his loved persons passed away
C. he wanted to enjoy his life's great changes
D. it was too difficult for him to get good grades.
- () 65. The purpose of the writer is probably to _____.
A. advise us to have a correct attitude towards success
B. inspire us to lead an active life each day
C. remind us to set a goal for our life
D. advise us to work hard to achieve our success

C

Many ordinary people ranging from volunteers to media workers have dedicated (奉献) themselves to fighting the novel coronavirus. They prove that ordinary people can still do their part during difficult times.

On Feb 12, Dalian (not his real name) was taking a train to Changsha, Hunan, for a business trip. While on the train, he went into a carriage (车厢) to have lunch and chose to remain in the carriage. He did not realize that the carriage was only for people heading to Wuhan.

Several hours later, when the train arrived in Wuhan, Dalian was asked to get off, as he was in the special carriage. Although he was surprised, he didn't want to cause trouble and got off the carriage with just a single bag.

As Wuhan had been locked down because of the epidemic (流行病), Dalian couldn't find a hotel to stay in. Feeling at a loss, he saw a notice online looking for volunteers to work in hospitals. The payment was 500 yuan a day. Dalian decided to give it a try. He soon became a volunteer at Wuhan No 1 Hospital. He was responsible for taking out trash, mopping (拖) the floor, disinfecting (消毒) the hospital, dealing with used protective suits and bringing meals to patients.

The young man, reportedly from northeast China, had to work 12 hours every day, changing his protective suit three times a day. While working, he couldn't drink anything or go to the bathroom. He also had to have close contact with infected patients, which is risky.

Dalian was afraid of getting infected at first. "When I entered the wards (病房), I was kind of frozen and felt like I couldn't move," he said. But after seeing more patients get better, his fear gradually went away.

Dalian's story has since gone viral (走红的) online. People were surprised by his experience, but also described him as having “a heart of gold”.

- () 66. From the passage ,we can see that Dalian is _____ in Wuhan No.1 Hospital.
A.coward B.deaf C.viral D.hard-working
- () 67. Why did Dalian have to get off in Wuhan?
A. Because he went there for a business trip.
B. Because he was in the wrong carriage.
C. Because he chose to have lunch in Wuhan.
D. Because he bought the wrong train ticket.
- () 68. What made Dalian decide to work at a hospital?
A. He had volunteer experience.
B. He ran out of money.
C. He wanted to become a doctor.
D. He had nowhere to go.
- () 69. Dalian’s job doesn’t include _____.
A. taking out trash and mopping the floor
B. disinfecting others’ protective suits
C. dealing with used protective suits
D. bringing meals to patients
- () 70. Which is probably the best title of this passage?
A. Let’s Volunteer Now
B. A Surprise Volunteer
C. Go Home
D. A Heart of Gold

六、阅读理解填词 (共 10 小题, 每小题 1 分, 满分 10 分)

阅读短文, 在其后空白处写出各单词的正确形式。单词的第一个字母已经给出。

As you grow older, there will be certain events that will mark your growth. Graduating from high school and getting your first job are just a few of these. What are some other ways in which we mark our j___76___ towards adulthood?

In the US, getting your driver's license at the age of 16 is seen as a major coming-of-age (成人) ritual (仪式). You may have seen kids c___77___ their first car in movies and TV shows. It is the first true t___78___ of independence for most teenagers. But not every teenager gets a car right away. U___79___, their parents will buy a second-hand car for them as their first car.

Another big coming-of-age event is the prom (毕业舞会). H___80___ at the end of the year, the prom is a graduation celebration for senior high school students. Teenagers wear fancy clothing, ask each other to dance and vote (投票) for a prom "king" and "queen". For many teenagers, prom is the biggest social event of the year. It's a time for them to dress and a___81___ like an adult.

And there's still more. At the age of 18, we can vote in the US - and at 21, we can drink alcohol (酒). This is also the time when most children m___82___ out of their parents' home for college or work. It is around this age that society starts to c___83___ us to be adults. But what does it really mean to be an adult?

Psychologist Jeffrey Arnett surveyed young adults and found three c___84___ adulthood goals: taking r___85___ for yourself, making independent decisions, and being financially (经济上) independent.

I agree with Arnett. Being an adult has more to do with one's maturity (成熟). If you want to drive, vote, drink, leave home or even start a romantic relationship, you have to make sure that you're ready to be responsible.
