“Are you listening, Simon?” the teacher asked. It was a very usual question. Simon never listened or tried hard in class. Talking was much better.

“You’ll learn something if you listen,” Mrs Jacobs said.

That evening, Simon started to feel that his throat(喉咙) really hurt. The next morning, when he opened his mouth to say “Good morning”, nothing came out. He lost his voice.

When he got to school, Simon didn’t say anything. By the time the class started, almost everyone was looking at him strangely.

Penny raised her hand. “Mrs Jacobs, why isn’t Simon talking?”

“I’m sick. I can’t talk,” Simon wrote it down.

Simon sat in class. He was so bored because he couldn’t talk to his friends. He had nothing to do, so he decided to pay attention to what the teacher said.

You know what? That night he could do his homework quickly so that he got more TV time. And he could also play one hour before the sleeping time.

Several days later, Simon’s voice came back, but he didn’t say anything like before. He listened and raised his hand to speak. What a difference that one day made!

The novel Me Before You tells a story that you might never forget. It is the latest bestseller by the British writer Jojo Moyes. The book has been made into a film. The British actress Emilia Clark and the actor Sam Claflin play the main roles in the film.

There are two main characters in the book. One is Louisa Clark or Lou, a girl who lost her job at a café. The other is William Traynor or Will, a young man who became disabled after an accident. Lou ends up taking a job because she has to take care of Will. At first, they don’t like each other very much. However, they gradually(渐地) become good friends.

When I read the book, I was interested in its language. There are a lot of descriptions that show the characters’ feelings. Also, there are many detailed descriptions of the environments around the characters.

At the end of the book, Will writes in a letter, “Just live well, just live.” This short sentence is the last words that Will writes to Lou. It shows Will’s deep feelings 59.What is NOT mentioned in the first paragraph? _____

- 60.What do we know about Will?

61. Will hoped to _____ before he became disabled.

- 62.What is the writer's purpose in writing the passage? _____

- D

Papa allows them to find “grandchildren” who will spend time with them and carry out small tasks.

The app needs the old to pay $15 an hour and the young visitors get at least $10 per visit. According to different types of trips, the young visitors get different pay.

Mr Parker, from the United States, founded the app because he couldn't spend time with his grandfather. He named the app after his grandfather and is now hoping more people from America, the UK and Japan can use it in the future. Besides, he believes it can also provide other groups with services in the future, such as taking care of children and caring for adults with autism (孤独症).

63. What does the underlined word “available” mean?

64. What can old people do if they use Papa?

- A. They can make some money online.
B. They can ask their grandchildren to go back home.
C. They can ask Papa's workers to do anything for them.
D. They can find young people to visit them.

65. How much should an old person pay for four-hour company (陪伴)?
 A. 40 dollars. B. 60 dollars. C. 80 dollars. D. 100 dollars.
66. What's the passage mainly about?
 A. A new kind of service in America.
 B. How to find your lost grandchildren.
 C. Why to spend more time with your family.
 D. The most popular app in America.

When everyone in China is wearing masks to stop the novel coronavirus, many people in Western countries don't seem to want to do the same. For example, an Italian lawmaker was criticized (批评) by his coworkers when he went to work with a mask. They said he was "causing panic" (制造恐慌). But why do the East and West have different ideas about wearing masks? Let's take a look.

In the West, people should wear masks only when they get sick. People see masks as a tool to protect sick people and stop disease from spreading, so healthy people don't need to wear them. Some European and American people say wearing a mask outdoors makes them feel "worried", "shy", and "afraid of being looked at differently."

But as the number of COVID-19 cases is growing around the world, people in the West are changing their ideas. In the US, for example, many healthy people are starting to wear masks now to protect themselves.

In Asian countries like China and Japan, wearing masks is common. During the 2003 SARS epidemic(流行病), people in China and East Asia also used masks to protect themselves. Many Chinese also like to wear masks to stay warm in winter or protect against air pollution.

In Japan, wearing masks shows your politeness when you get a cold or flu. Some Japanese also turn masks into fashion accessories. They have different colors and patterns to choose to match their clothes. Some young women wear masks when they don't have their makeup (化妆) on. Many pop stars in Asia also use masks to protect their privacy. This cultural and historical background has made it easier for people in the East to wear masks when epidemics break out.

67. What did the coworkers think of the Italian lawmaker? _____
 A. He was too worried to work.
 B. He made other people nervous.
 C. He was unwilling to go to work.
 D. He was just trying to protect himself.
68. In the past, people in the West wore masks when _____.
 A. they themselves were sick B. they were talking to doctors
 C. they were shy or worried D. they went outdoors
69. From the story, what might people use masks to do in Japan? _____
 a. Show politeness. b. Protect privacy.
 c. Look fashionable. d. Protect their make up.
 A. abc B. bcd C. acd D. abd
70. From the story, we know that _____.

- A. healthy people in the West will never wear masks
- B. wearing masks is the best way to protect ourselves
- C. we can use masks in many different ways
- D. masks are not useful during a serious epidemic
