You and your family are planning a picnic for tomorrow. So you want to _____ 36 _____ the weather forecast first to see whether there will be rain or not. Your father turns on the television and the family listens to the _____ 37 _____ make the weather report.

"It will be partly cloudy tomorrow morning, _____ 38 _____ clearing by early afternoon. The high temperature tomorrow will be 85."

As there will be no rain, the whole family feels 39. Without the weather forecast, you would not know this, and you would just have to take your 40. But now, you can plan your picnic without worrying whether it will rain or not.

The man you can thank for this is Cleveland Abbe. He is known as the father of the weather bureau. He was the first person to publish 41 weather forecasts in the United States.

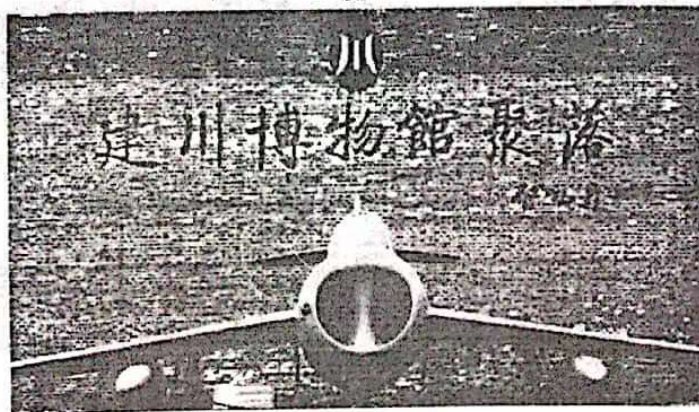

Abbe began his weather bulletins (简报) every day in 1869. They were based on weather maps he drew from telegraphed reports of weather 42. Because of their accuracy (准确), the reports were 43.

Congress (国会) became 44 in Abbe's weather reports. They made Abbe a meteorologist (气象学家), and he 45 to issue (发布) forecasts three times a day. He was the first official forecaster of the U.S. Weather Service. Because he often forecasted probable storms, Abbe earned the nickname of "Old Probabilities".

Updated: 2017-07-13 10:02:59

On July 11 at the 10th Symposium for Overseas High-level Talents and Overseas Academician Qingdao "Yanxi Lake Forum", 87-aged Yuan Longping from Hunan province, Academician of Chinese Academy of Engineering and American Academy of Science, delivered an English speech on super hybrid rice (超级杂交水稻) fluently for 20 minutes.

Up to 12:00 am on July 12, his English speech video had been accumulatively (累计地) viewed for more than 100 million times and his delivering the English speech at such high age had received a hot search on Weibo for about 200,000 times.

Yuan Longping mentioned in the speech as below:

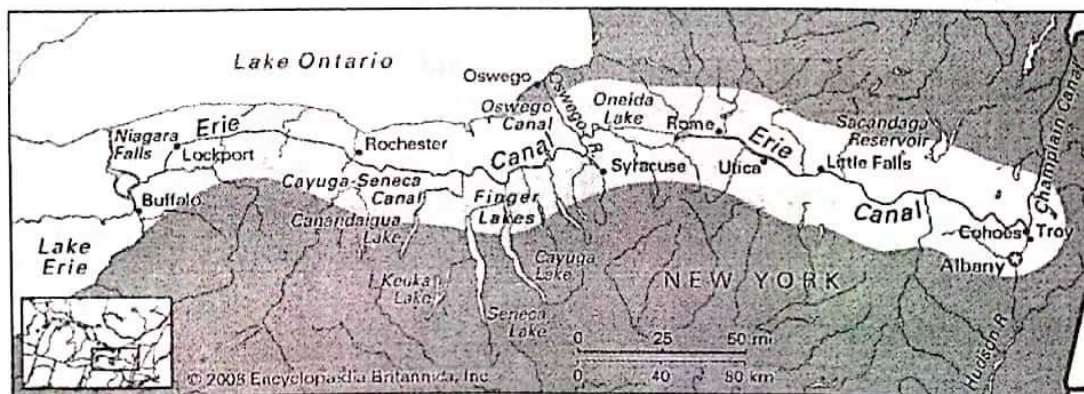

It is expected that 60% more rice should be produced in 2030 than that in 1995. Currently, 1 ha. (公顷) for rice production provides food for 27 people. By 2050, 1 ha. will have to support 43 people.

"Yuan has made huge contributions to the country's agricultural (农业的) development. He has fed generations of people," one net user wrote. "It's a surprise that Yuan can speak English at his age," another commented.

根据短文内容, 判断句子正误, 正确的涂 A, 错误的涂 B。

56. Yuan Longping delivered an English speech on July the 10th.
57. From the passage we know that Yuan Longping was 87 years old in 2017.
58. Lots of people watched Yuan Longping's English speech on the Internet.
59. Now 1 ha. for rice production provides food for 43 people.

The Erie Canal was the first important national waterway built in the US. It crossed New York State (州) from Buffalo on Lake Erie to Albany on the Hudson River. It joined the Great Lakes with the Atlantic Ocean.

Over the canal industrial goods (工业产品) could flow into the west, and materials could pour into the east. The Erie Canal helped New York develop into the nation's largest city.

The building of the canal was paid for completely by the state of New York. It cost $7,143,789, but it soon gained its price many times over. Between 1825, when the canal was opened, and 1882, when toll charges (过运河费) were stopped, the state collected $121,461,891.

For a hundred years before the Erie Canal was built, people had been talking about a canal to join the Great Lakes and the Atlantic Ocean. The man who planned the Erie Canal and carried the plan through was De Witt Clinton. At that time some people laughingly called it "Clinton's Ditch (沟)". Clinton talked and wrote about the canal and drew up plans for it. He and Governor Morris went to Washington in 1812 to ask for help for the canal, but they were unsuccessful.

Clinton became governor of New York State in 1817, and shortly afterwards, on July 4, 1817, broke ground for the canal in Rome of New York State. The first part of the canal was completed in 1820. As the canal grew, towns along its course developed fast. The length of the canal is 363 miles.
